1) What makes your jurisdiction, the Leesburg District, great?

Leesburg is a traditional authentic hometown full of great people, places, history and culture. Although Loudoun County is one of the fastest growing counties in the nation, Leesburg, the county seat, has kept its charm and historic character.

We may appreciate being a small town, but we are diverse and welcome new neighbors as we continue to grow. Our neighborhoods are safe and friendly and our schools are excellent. The best thing about my district, though, is the people I get to serve as their Supervisor. I am fortunate to serve a community full of highly skilled, hard-working, caring neighbors.

2) In 20 words or less, what message would you like to share with the George Mason University community?

Being Supervisor has been a blessing, but an extremely demanding job. I strongly encourage the GMU community to do the same and serve their community.

3) What is the biggest challenge facing your jurisdiction today?

Leesburg is a growing and diverse community. Transportation is No. 1 on my bucket list of priorities. It is by far the biggest challenge we face. The town still has many roads and interchanges that have not been built, but we were blessed when former Gov. McDonnell and the General Assembly worked in a bipartisan way last year to fund Northern Virginia's pressing transportation needs.

4) What is your favorite local restaurant?

One of my favorite restaurants here is Lightfoot, which is located in a beautiful old World Bank building that was painstakingly preserved. Even the bank vault door is in plain view.
